welcome to HOME FOR 10

Hello and the warmest welcome to Scotland's Annual Homelessness Conference

The conference is marking ten years since the removal of the priority need test in Scotland; the result of progressive legislation from the Scottish Parliament which created an almost universal right to housing in Scotland. But the 2012 commitment did not end homelessness in Scotland. Rights were seen to leverage action, accountability and help increase expectations – but on their own were not enough when efforts to prevent homelessness had not been widescale or early enough or the supply of affordable housing sufficient.

With 2032 the target date for 110,000 new affordable homes in Scotland, many are eyeing the opportunity to align this more realistic housing investment with new duties to prevent homelessness – to assure everyone has a home to build and live their lives.

Home for 10 will spotlight what the last 10 years has taught us and debate how this should influence the 10 years ahead.

Please sit back and enjoy today's conference – or join in and participate. Thank you all for joining us.

BREAKOUT SESSIONS 13:45 - 14:55 Choose one from:

1. The Art of Advocacy and Activism | Barra meeting room

Session Outline

National and local plans to end homelessness are about aligning the right supply of housing in the places people want to live. And about creating a 'no wrong door' approach for people who need support and services. But what about people who are experiencing tough times today? People who can't wait for the promises of long-term plans and visions. Advocacy and local activism is critical in getting alongside people today and in a range of different ways — from exercising rights, to securing living essentials. This workshop will hear from change-makers demonstrating the art of the possible. Join us to learn more about what works — and discuss together how grassroots action can help people earlier, and closer to home.

Session Guests

Pinar Aksu

Human Rights & Advocacy Coordinator, Maryhill Integration Network

Stephen Wishart

Shelter Scotland

Hosted by

Michelle Major

2. Ask About Housing | Shuna meeting room

Session Outline

All homelessness starts in a community – and we know which communities are most likely to be affected too. But councils carry the can for missed opportunities to prevent homelessness earlier. Because preventing homelessness needs a collective responsibility across a much wider range of public services — and at the heart of communities too.

This workshop will explore how we create an enabling culture that 'asks about housing' when people we connect with have money worries or problems at home. Learn from the lottery-funded 'Staying In' action learning programme that took an innovative place-based approach to preventing homelessness. And get the latest from the Scottish Government Homelessness Prevention Team about new legal duties to prevent homelessness.

3. Measuring What Matters | Jura meeting room

Session Outline

We make decisions every day about how best to support the people we're working with, about our practice and about our policies. But how do we know what difference we're making?

This session will explore how to decide what to measure and how to use that evidence to better understand impact at a national and local level. Come and learn about a national group tasked with making recommendations for measuring the impact of the Ending Homelessness Together Action Plan — and from Aberdeen City Council who are developing their own impact measurements at the local authority level.

Session Guests

Graeme Gardner

Aberdeen City Council

Gavin Smith

Fife Council and CIH Scotland Chair

Hosted by

Ruth Whatling

4. No Wrong Door | Castle Suite

Session Outline

Those of us that face disadvantage and adversity often get a less joined-up service response. This can keep people locked-in or locked-out of the system of services that are intended to help. It can be a complex maze for people navigating services and a journey that forces people to repeat their story multiple times.

This session is for people who want to learn more about our shared ambitions to explore practical and local solutions in how support services can achieve better joined up working across sectors. We will identify the seven keys to the No Wrong Door approach and discuss how good policy intentions can be translated successfully into practice.

Session Guests

Policy Officer, Scottish Government

Hosted by
